“IT HAPPENS
HERE”

#SaferShetland

Background

Following on from #WisToo, The Compass Centre, also known as Shetland Rape Crisis, has curated a digital and print awareness-raising project focused on experiences of sexual harassment and intimate image abuse in Shetland.

To ensure the campaign is informed by realistic concerns in our community, we invited folk to make anonymous submissions reflecting on their experiences of sexual harassment and intimate image abuse in Shetland. Over the four-week submission period we received almost 200 first-hand accounts.

Submissions were gathered with informed consent through an anonymous Google Doc with the opportunity to retract or change submissions up to a week after the closing date. The submissions were then carefully looked through to ensure that anonymity and confidentiality were upheld.

A few quotes were selected to appear as part of the printed poster campaign on buses across the isles, and all submissions are published in this document to respect survivor's stories and ensure that all voices are heard.

What is Sexual Harassment and Intimate Image Abuse?

Sexual harassment and intimate image abuse can happen to anyone and are behaviours that form just one part of a wider set of cultural values that enable other forms of sexual violence such as assault, abuse and rape.

#SaferShetland

Campaign Against Sexual Harassment
and Intimate Image Abuse

What is Sexual Harassment?

Sexual harassment is any words or actions of a sexual nature that are not wanted or agreed to.

It may include, but is not limited to:
cat-calling / wolf-whistling /
other street harassment, unwanted comments of a sexual nature,
unwelcome sexual advances, and unwelcome comments based on your gender and/or sexuality.

Sexual harassment can occur in person, digitally, or even over the phone.

#SaferShetland

Campaign Against Sexual Harassment
and Intimate Image Abuse

What is Intimate Image Abuse?

Intimate image abuse consists of intimate images (photos, video, and/or audio recordings) of you being shared without your consent, or threats to share these.

This may include, but is not limited to: intimate images that are originally sent with consent but then further shared and/or kept without consent, intimate images taken without your knowledge or consent, and threats to create and/or share intimate images if you do not comply with the perpetrator's wishes.

The sharing of intimate images often forms a part of wider abuse and is sometimes known colloquially as "revenge porn".

Content Warning

The following document contains descriptions of sexual violence (including harassment, assault, abuse, and rape) which have occurred in Shetland.

Some submissions mention specific locations and events in Shetland where contributors to the campaign say these things were done to them. These accounts may be challenging to read and at times may feel confronting.

The integrity of contributor's own words has been maintained as far as possible and the contents within this document reflect the submissions received only.

At The Compass Centre, we recognise that sexual violence and harm happens in all places and contexts, and that tackling it takes a collective response. We hope that Shetlanders' brave submissions to this campaign will contribute to the wider community continuing to work together towards a making our islands a safer place to live, work and socialise for all.

“ My ex boyfriend sexually harassed me at events in Hillswick and Lerwick. I didn't tell anyone as most people think he's nice just because he's very outgoing. He also sent unsolicited videos of himself masturbating and begged me to do sexual things that I didn't want to do. When we broke up, he became involved with someone who sexually abused me when I was an adolescent; recently took advantage of me when I was intoxicated and blamed me. ”

I have wanted to get this off my chest for so long. Thank you for taking this step, I hope it helps many others as it seems men rarely tell anyone about these issues.

I have been in the music scene my entire life. The vast majority of the time, it is wonderful! Tunes, sprees, and lots of great friendships both old and new.

As I have gotten older and things have opened up more, I often think of the darker side of things that tend to be brushed aside. I remember the first time very well. I was 14, at a dance after a gig. They reached around from behind me in a hall passage, pulled down my zip and groped me. It was one of my friend's older siblings.

Looking back, this is just a recurring pattern. I don't believe I can recall a big event where there wasn't some unexpected sexual element.

One time, we played a gig and the atmosphere was fantastic. I came off stage buzzing and a person I know congratulated me, then as we finished chatting she kissed me on the cheek, hugged me, but also squeezed my crotch for what seemed like an eternity. Later, I made my excuses that I was too tired for the afterparty and just went home. Still happy to have entertained people but disappointed in how my night ended.

It feels like it will never stop. I have learned to live with it over the years. But thank you for giving me somewhere to get this off my chest. I am actually smiling as I write this last bit. Like a weird flood of relief to finally tell someone how it's made me feel.

Thanks again.

It started with suggestive behaviour, then it was touching that was claimed to be accidental, however it carried on and on and obviously wasn't accidental. Gradually the touching started to get closer to intimate places on my body. I said no, god knows how many times I said no.

One day my manager had obviously had a drink at lunchtime. I could smell it on their breath as they once again came too close to me, taking advantage of my subordinate position in the workplace. I just knew something was going to happen, and sure enough they reached down between my legs grabbed my private parts and made a suggestion that we should find somewhere quite to go. I wanted to shout rape.

I had wanted to speak to the personnel manager for months. I had even considered phoning the Police, but this was a heavily female dominated workplace, and I am a man. Who the hell believes men when they complain about unwanted groping? This doesn't happen to men does it? I'm afraid it does and it is not the first time that I have been subjected to it in a workplace. I took the only way out and left the job.

Working in a pub in Shetland was always hard. Not even in Lerwick, it was one of the country pubs. Party buses would come and go each Saturday, some completely fine and friendly. Others were not. The amount of sexual harassment I received as a barmaid/bar staff was sickening and eventually lead to me leaving my higher level bar job to work in another job with lower pay.

On one particular occasion, a bus full of folk around my own age were in and were playing their music too loud and breaking things. So I went through and asked them to stop and to just leave the premises. I was ignored so I went and turned off their speaker and tried to speak to one of them. I was grabbed by the shoulders and another person turned the music on. The man who had grabbed me forced me against himself and made me “dance” with him. I couldn’t get him off of me, and although this experience wasn’t overly sexual, it was just as horrifying and affected me that way.

Another occasion happened with a man older than myself, probably old enough to be my dad. I was working on a busy night and had to go out to the store for more stock. I couldn’t squeeze past him without it being uncomfortable so I asked him to move and he gestured to me to just squeeze past, so I did. As I squeezed past he grabbed my bum.

I turned around and slapped him out of anger, not very hard. I wished I had full blown punched him but felt I couldn’t while at work. He just laughed at me as if it was a joke so I pointed in his face and said “don’t you dare touch my body.” I always feel that you should ridicule them in front of their friends or other people if you can. Then they have more of a chance to never do it again to someone else. I shouldn’t have to think that way.

I have worked for the Council most of my adult life. I have never really considered most things as sexual harassment until recently. There was a survey we got about sexual harassment in the Council a couple of years ago. I was crying by the end of filling it out, thinking of how normalised it is for us to be sexualized, had opened up in all my answers and shared things I had kept bottled up for decades. Only to get a real punch in the gut at the end when it was made clear the survey was only meant for women.

It is still completely normal for us to get our bums squeezed, asked to show off our muscles, having photos taken when working shirtless or drenched in sweat.

There is never a UHA where at least one or two female workmates try to grab a feel or force an unwanted kiss. It's just a laugh when its men that are targeted. I have lost count of the number of times I have had to leave something because it upset me, I am in my 50's now and it is just as common as ever. Men don't matter, and I doubt we ever will.

Someone sexually abused me in public when I was younger. When I confided in a friend, she said “my heart goes out to him” as she believed that sex offenders must have been sexually abused themselves when actually the vast majority of people who are abused do not go on to abuse others! I’m sick of people’s attitude towards sexual violence here!

A man from Shetland who raped me when he was a minor, stalked me in Shetland and Aberdeen. I didn't report it immediately as I had terrible experience with Shetland police when I reported him for raping me. Even though he was on bail for a sex offence, at the time I reported him for stalking, he was clearly allowed to roam freely as the police failed to track him down for months.

When I was 14, I was sexually assaulted in a prominent place in Lerwick and later raped in every way behind a building. People said that I “wanted it to happen” because I froze. They said that he “must have been sexually abused” despite there being no evidence of this. Later he was charged for a similar crime, and some people still make these comments about what happened to me.

I have experienced sexual assault on a night out. A man grabbed me, and two of my friends inappropriately in a night club one night years ago. So much so that the police were called and he was taken to court. The day we entered court, he admitted to it because there was clear CCTV footage of the incident. In a way this was lucky, a lot of women don't have the "luxury" of having proof and it is just their word.

Last year I was sexually assaulted in a country pub.

I was wearing an outfit that I felt comfortable in and that I had worn lots of times before to numerous places including work, school or to see family/friends.

I want to speak about the after effect of my sexual assault because as important as it is to speak about what happened it is also important to speak about what happens after, the mental and physical effects.

The day after it happened to me I woke up got dressed and went to work. I felt nothing it literally was like my brain was silent... only until people at work kept on asking me if I was okay. I knew I was lying when I said I was fine but I couldn't admit what had happened to them let alone myself. However when I did open up I was surrounded with support and it really helped.

So I went to the police station and gave my statement. I knew it was the right thing to do as it might prevent someone from being a victim. Being asked lots of questions by the police was one of the hardest things I have ever had to do because every detail is noted and you have to go over everything that happened. But I'm glad I did as I feel it made me open up and realise what had happened to me was in no way right and that I needed justice.

I went to court. I said my statement.
AND I WON.
